Tom Jones, by Henry Fielding, is a classic English novel. It captures the spirit of its age. Its famous characters have come to represent Augustan society of the mid-18th century in all its loquacious, turbulent and comic variety.

The central character is an attractively unbridled young man of fierce temper. He pursues true love through contemporary Britain in a sequence of scandalous and hilarious adventures.

Never mind its numerous chapters and teeming cast of misfits and scoundrels, the novel has a fast-paced plot which keeps readers absorbed to the very end. It is full of thrilling moments, romantic scenes and drama of human society. The main characters are well-developed and realistically portrayed the spirit of the English.

I thoroughly recommend Tom Jones. It is a classic novel which is well worth reading. I am sure that the characters of the book will never disappoint you.
